ABRF New Membership Compass: A Guide to Navigating the ABRF Community

Your Introduction to ABRF

Welcome to the Association of Biomolecular Resource Facilities (ABRF), the core facilities community. We hope you are enjoying the opportunity to engage with your colleagues, locally and globally, to help you answer questions and share best practices for core facilities.

The ABRF Membership Committee is here to help you make the most of your commitment to ABRF, which is an investment in your own success and professional development.

To help new members discover and engage with many of the aspects and value available through ABRF, the Membership Committee has launched COMPASS - a series of messages to tell you more about the diverse resources available to all ABRF members. You will receive a new message throughout your first year of ABRF membership, to tell you more about how to make the most of your ABRF membership.

For many members, the first place youâ€™ll engage with ABRF is through the ABRF web site, www.abrf.org. Managed by the ABRF Communications Committee, the ABRF web site provides members access to useful resources, including:

- Prior meeting presentations and session recordings
- Discussion forums to pose questions and share ideas with other ABRF members
- ABRF Member Directory
- Job Openings at core facilities
- ABRF Journal of Biomolecular Techniques

The ABRF web site is evolving, and we welcome your suggestions for how we might improve the value of the site, including for new members. If you have suggestions for the web site, share those with the Communications Committee.

Feel free to contact any of us if you would like assistance to navigate all that ABRF has to offer. ABRF is your community and we are here to help.

Once again, welcome to ABRF.
